CORNELL BEATS STANFORD IN MOST THRILLING RACE EVER ROWED ON HUDSON

Oarsmen from the Coast, Who Were Ignored by Experts, Were Real Heroes of the Event.

By Kobert Bagren.

HOSE few inhabitants of the State of New York who were not a Poughkeepsie yesterday afternoon missed seeing the greatest boat race ever rowed on the famous Hudson course.

There have been thrills in years gone by, but never before such a thrill as went through fifty thousand spectators when the Stanford University crew, those much overlooked and underestimated giants from far California, finished with a magnificent half mile spurt that cut down the winning lead of peerless Corneil and sent the champions of East and West leaping bow to bow at the finish line.

West leaping bow to bow at the finish line.

Where I sat in the observation trein I had heard all through the race the inspiring yells of Cornell and Syracuse rooters on one side, and of Columbia and Pennsylvania on the Stanford and Cornell fighting nose to the other. Yet, when that last terrific drive came and the cardinal hue of Stanford's carbiades could be seen flashing side by side with Cornell's blue and white I heard only one single, pulsing, overwhelming roar of "STANFORD! STANFORD! STANFORD!

In astonishment I looked around to the Cornell car, for Cornell was still fighting, gaining and losing a foot or owith each long, strong stroke, and surely there should be some sound or Cornell yell. But to my amagement there were the Cornell men, fags flying frantically, mouths wide open, arms beating time to the roaring yolune of sound that came from their stout lungs and throats of brans. And svery Cornell man was yolling, like all the rest, the same refrain; "STANFORD!" There was aportsmanship! The kind that places recognition of a heroic effort above the joy and delight in winning; that can recognize merit even in a fival.

The five housand people on the observation train were sarriesing it. The deafoning roar of it rose from the fiver shore even whon Cornell, calling for that last desperate and well-controlled effort, had pulled up, inch ly incomply and the fiver shore even whon Cornell, calling for that last desperate and well-controlled effort, had pulled up, inch ly incomply and the fiver shore even whon Cornell, calling for that last desperate and well-controlled effort, had pulled up, inch ly incomply and the fiver shore even whon Cornell, calling for that last desperate and well-controlled effort, had pulled up, inch ly incomply and the fiver shore even whon Cornell, calling for that last desperate and well-controlled effort, had pulled up, inch ly incomply and the fiver shore even whon Cornell, calling for that last desperate and well-controlled effort, had pulled up, inch ly incomply the fiver shore even whon Cornell, calling for that last desperate and well-controlled effort, had pulled up, inch ly incomply the fiver shore even whon Cornell, calling for that last desperate and well-controlled effort, had pulled up, inch ly incomply the fiver shore even whon Cornell, calling for that last desperate and well-controlled effort, had pulled up, inch ly incomply the five shore the fiver shore even whon Cornell, calling for that last desperate should be seen to the fiver shore even whon Cornell, calling

Oldest and Youngest Coach Share Fruits of Victory

THE Cornell crew, winner yesterday at Poughkeepsie, was trained by the sixty-eight-year-old veteran Charles A. Courtney, while the Stanford eight, which came within a few feet of snatching five, formerly a coxswain. Frank Guerena, the youthful wonder, saw his charges in action. Courtney, on the other hand, was too ill to leave his bed. Indeed, the veteran was in such bad condition after the race that he was harried aboard a train and sent back to Ithaca in charge
